

Bio for Sean Fowler – Q Lab

Sean Fowler is Technical Marketing Specialist at Q-Lab Corporation. He is responsible for identifying testing solutions to the challenge of weathering durability and light stability, working with a variety of domestic and international industries. Sean enjoys teaching customers about the fundamentals of weathering testing and learning from their experiences.

During Sean's 10 years with Q-Lab, he has developed technical training programs and held seminars around the world, in addition to providing direct technical support to customers.

Sean's experience allows him to work with all levels of organizations that need to test products for weathering or light stability, from the product manager to the technicians who actually perform tests. He works to dispel common myths about weathering testing, including the perception that one must be an expert to understand it.

Sean holds a BA in Business Management from Malone University in Canton, Ohio, and an MBA from Kent State University in Kent, Ohio.