in compounds have been used as catalysts for the isocyanate/hydroxyl reaction.

However, the tin materials are not selective and also catalyze the hydrolysis of ester groups in addition to the isocyanate/hydroxyl reaction.

This investigation reports the findings of various metal salts and chelates. For example, zirconium chelates are very selective activating only the isocyanate/hydroxyl reaction and not the isocyanate-water reaction. Thus, a method has been found using the zirconium chelate catalyst in waterborne isocyanate crosslinked two component coatings. Mechanisms for this process will be discussed.
