The majority of developments in coatings focus on 3 central areas: reducing environmental impact, increasing performance and functionality as well as reducing costs to end-users. Recent developments in light stabilizer chemistry allow for improvements in all of these areas. Some recent triazine chemistry has extended the performance of this class of highly stabilized UV absorbers, with higher extinctions and longer wavelength absorptions. Additionally, chemistry for the compatibilization of known, hydrophobic molecules was developed to favor the use of light stabilizers in zero VOC systems. Finally, functionalization of Hindered Amine Light Stabilizers (HALS) with hydroxyl groups minimizes migration of chemistry from critical areas of the coating.

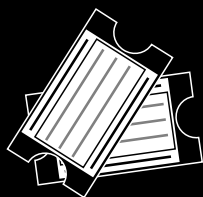

Jonathan Rogers received his Ph.D. in chemistry from the University of Rochester and started at Ciba Additives Research and Development in 2000. He worked in R&D for 4 years, developing Hindered Amine Light Stabilizers, photoinitiators and new fluorescent chromophores. Jonathan joined the NAFTA coatings group in 2004 as technical service manager and switched to his current role in marketing the following year.
