PEARLESCENT PIGMENTS

Ann Pigoni, EMD

Not all "pearlescent" pigments are the same.

Pigments which display a polychromatic appearance are often referred to as "pearlescent" pigments. Within the coatings industry, most think of pearlescent pigments as synthetic pigments based largely on titanium dioxide (and sometimes iron oxide) deposited on mica. In fact, mica is only one of the substances used in the manufacture of "pearlescent" effect pigments. In this presentation, an overview of the various substances used, and the corresponding color effects that can be attained with "pearlescent" pigments will be shown.

As Coatings Account Manager, ANN PIGONI has been representing EMD Chemicals for 9 years in the Midwest. She holds a B.S. in Chemistry from Cleveland State University. Prior to joining EMD, Ann developed her technical skills as a chemist for 12 years with Sherwin-Williams Company focusing on color matching, pigments and test methods. At Union Carbide she was involved in the R&D of Lithium Batteries. She is a member of the Cleveland Coating Society, CPMA, and former Vice-Chair of ASTM Committee D1.26.

Ann resides in Parma, OH with her husband and 2 teenagers. She is also active in Scouting and is currently working towards her black belt in Isshin-ryu Karate.
