Technical Meeting Abstract

Lower VOC Waterborne Epoxy Systems with Improved Performance

Vincent Hickman Technical Service Manager, Hexion Inc.

In many coatings applications, end-users have recognized that waterborne epoxy coatings perform equivalently to, and in some cases, even outperform solvent-borne epoxy polyamide coatings. These lower VOC coatings are based on globally- available waterborne epoxy binder systems.

This paper focuses on some of the newest products and innovations developed to help coatings formulators meet their customers' needs for faster dry, improved flexibility, outstanding adhesion, long-term corrosion resistance and lower total solvent content.

Three major drivers for development of new waterborne epoxy coatings have been lower cost, lower VOC and improved performance.

Vincent Hickman graduated with a Bachelor's of Science in Chemistry from Benedict College in 2000. For 18 years, Vincent has worked in some capacity in the Paint and Coatings industry. Vincent's current role is Technical Service Manager for Coatings in the Americas with Hexion Epoxy Division. Vincent's prior work experience includes Nexeo Solution-Technical Service Sales Support, DecoArt-Technical Director/Formulation Chemist, CoAtex Inc.- Key Account Formulation Chemist, and Atotech USA-Laboratory Technician
