April Technical Meeting:

Light Stabilization of Waterborne and Epoxy Coatings

Dr. I-Chyang Lin, Senior TD Everlight USA

The development of environmental friendly waterborne coatings with good exterior durability has been an important topic in recent years. A series of light stabilizers designed for waterborne coating formulations are developed. They are based on a unique, non-dispersion type of technology, which has advantages of very high %active content, easy incorporation – stirred-in, post-addable and stable.

Epoxy is one of the most important resin systems used in protective and industrial coating applications. It's well known that epoxies are highly subject to light-induced yellowing and degradation. Light stabilization (anti-yellowing) of epoxy using light stabilizers has been difficult and challenging. Several light stabilizers have been developed (by Everlight) to control/minimize the yellowing for both solvent based and water based epoxy coatings.

Examples of suitable applications, performance data, experimental design, as well as light stabilization principle and mechanism will also be included and discussed.

Dr. I-Chyang Lin is Senior Technical Director of Everlight USA Inc. He holds a B.S. in Chemistry from National Taiwan University, a M.S. in Polymers and Coatings from North Dakota State University and a Ph.D. in Materials Chemistry from Polytechnic University in New York. Dr. Lin's society affiliation activity history includes: FSCT/NYSCT, NACE, SSPC and ACS.
